

Submission Guidelines

Assessment & Development Matters (ADM) is published by the Psychological Testing Centre. Its readership is entrants on the Register of Qualifications in Test Use, holding BPS Educational, Forensic and Occupational testing qualifications.

The Editorial Team encourage submission of articles with a broad range of appeal, aimed at test users working in educational, forensic and occupational settings. ADM is particularly keen to publish articles in which research and practice are presented to inform and influence the test using community.

The Editorial Team aim to give a platform for a range of views that are not necessarily their own, nor those of the British Psychological Society.

Practitioner-focused general articles: must not exceed 1500 words including references and tables.

Research articles: must not exceed 1500 words, including references and tables (maximum of two legible tables/figures).

Research articles should conform to a standard template for test research submissions, available from the Coordinating Editor.

Brief articles of interest to practitioners: must not exceed 500 words and must not include tables/figures, i.e. research summaries, updates, conference reports, etc.

Book reviews: must not exceed 500 words.

Length: Please note that any article exceeding the word count will automatically be returned to the author for revision.

Article style: Articles should be written for an educated but varied testing audience and aim to engage the readership at large. Where appropriate, spelling should be Anglicised. Abbreviations and acronyms should be explained at least once in the text. Unless relevant to the sample, language should be non-gender specific. The Editorial Team reserve the right to remove any discriminatory language, and to edit articles to maintain sufficient standards.

References: British Psychological Society style, for example:

Sparrow, P. (2006). International recruitment, selection and assessment: Research report. London: Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development.

Van de Vijver, F.J.R. & Hambleton, R.K. (1996). Translating tests: Some practical guidelines. European Psychologist, 1, 89–99.

If you require further information, the Society's Style Guide is available to download from the publications page of www.bps.org.uk

Copyright: for all published articles remains with the British Psychological Society's Psychological Testing Centre. Authors are required to sign a copyright declaration upon submission of their article.

2017 Submission deadlines:

Spring: 28 November 2016
Summer: 27 February
Autumn: 2 June
Winter: 18 August

Submissions to: the Coordinating Editor as an e-mail attachment, saved in MS Word format: richard.smith@bps.org.uk

Editorial Team:

Senior Editor – Dr Nicky Hayes
Consultant Occupational Editor – Stuart Duff
Consultant Educational Editor – Dr Joanna Horne
Consultant Forensic Editor – Dr Robert Forde
Co-ordinating Editor – Richard Smith. Tel: +44 (0)116 252 9931

Assignment of copyright agreement

The British Psychological Society
Promoting excellence in psychology

We need you to give us written permission to publish your work – we cannot proceed without this. By completing this form you agree to assign copyright to us; however, as the original copyright holder you retain personal rights to use the material as set out below.

Assignment of copyright

In consideration of the publication in:

of my article entitled:

I hereby assign to The British Psychological Society worldwide copyright in the work named above in all forms of media, whether now known or later developed.

I warrant that the work does not infringe any existing copyright and will indemnify the Society against any breach of such warranty. (Please note: If your manuscript includes lengthy quotations, illustrations, etc., for which you do not own the copyright, it is your responsibility to obtain written permission from the copyright holder to use these and to pay any permission fees. Copies of such permission should be emailed to P4PManager@bps.org.uk)

I warrant that in the case of co-authorship, I have the permission of all co-authors to assign copyright as above.

I further warrant that publication of the work or any part of it will not constitute a breach of confidentiality or trust, or infringe any ethical obligations to individuals or organisations.

Name:

Date:

Address:

If the copyright is not yours to assign (e.g. if under your contract of employment it belongs to your employer), please give the name and address of the copyright holder here:

Name:

Address:

Extra printed copies

Society members automatically receive one printed copy. However, if you need extra copies for co-authors (if you are not a member of the Society) please indicate how many copies are required (maximum 10). These will be posted to the address above.

Your retained rights

As the original copyright holder you retain various rights to your work even after you assign copyright to the Society.

1. Copies for colleagues

You may send or transmit individual copies of the final Published Version of your article (i.e. the version that appears in print) in any format to colleagues upon their specific request provided no fee is charged, and further provided that there is no systematic distribution of the contribution (e.g. posting on an electronic mailing list, website or automated delivery).

2. Re-use in other publications

You may re-use all or part of the Accepted Version of your manuscript (i.e. the version accepted for publication before it has been edited and typeset) in any other publication you have authored or edited so long as the re-used material constitutes less than half of the total material in that new publication, and provided that the original publication is acknowledged.

3. Teaching/training duties

You may use the final Published Version of your article for teaching or training duties at your institution/place of employment by including it in course packs, e-reserves, presentations at professional conferences, in-house training, or distance learning. The contribution may not be used in seminars outside of normal teaching/training obligations (e.g. commercial seminars). Electronic posting of the final Published Version of your article in connection with teaching/training at your institution/place of employment is permitted subject to reasonable access controls being in place, such as requiring a user name and password, and access being limited to teachers/trainers and those being taught/trained. Posting the final Published Version on the open internet is not permitted.

4. Personal websites

You may upload the Accepted Version of the manuscript (i.e. NOT the final Published Version) on your personal website. Once the Society has published your article, the uploaded version must contain a notice as follows: 'This is a pre-publication version of the following article: [FULL CITATION]'

5. Repositories

You may place the Accepted Version of the manuscript (i.e. NOT the final Published Version) in a subject matter archive, or in your institution/employer's repository or archive. After publication the uploaded version must contain a notice as follows: 'This is a pre-publication version of the following article: [FULL CITATION]'